There were 250 men with officers in the force, and they left Toronto by two special trains, traveling, by special permission of the American government, through the states via Chicago and St. Paul, which was at that time the only means of reaching Winnipeg. The force got as far as Fargo, N. D., by rail, then the end of steel on the Northern Pacific railway. From there they marched to Dufferin, now Emerson, Man., where they were met by some of the fifty men of the force who had come out the previous fall to Winnipeg.

CHILDHOOD TRAITS

Last week Dean A. A. Cleveland of the Education Department at the State College of Washington was telling us over the radio about Traits of Childhood. He has spoken of two common traits, pugnacity and imitativeness.

"A fourth trait is the collecting is the collecting, as there is "style" in lit, just as in clothes or manners. It is a normal tendency and can be utilized at home and in school. If allowed to develop abnormally it occasionally produced a miser.

"All children seem to possess the instinct of workmanship, the desire to make or create things. It is the basis of manual arts work and other forms of construction that make a strong appeal to 'motor-minded' children. It may combine with curiosity, expressing itself in tear-ing things apart. Ecept in cases of anger, distruction is not willful, an expression of meanness. It is usually the result of curiosity and the desire to handle things.

important in the life of the child, and continue after maturity.

"Children are more suggestible than adults, as a rule. This is of great importance both at home and in school. By suggestion, reading may be directed, conduct regulated, and play controlled. It can be made a powerful force for either good or evil.

THE SAME

"Imagination is one of the interesting traits of childhood. There is an age of the imagination during which the child lives in a fanciful world. At this stage the intrusion of the real world hurts. The child does not want to be distrubed. He gets pleasure from his make-believe, and, what is more important, is gathering

"The world of the imagination is largely an unreal one; it is not a true one and leads the child to tell what is not true. He exaggerates, and is sometimes accused of lying. The fact is, he does not distinguish between the real and the fanciful. The only danger is that the child's development may become arrested this stage, not pass through it as children normally do. It is a perfect-ly normal thing for a child to exag-gerate, to tell what is not true. He is not lying in the ordinary sense of the word. He does not distinguish the true from the false.

"These are a few of the fund-amental traits of childhood, There are many others which it will repay parents and teachers to study."

EXTRACTING JUICE FOR JELLS

Fruit juice is more easily extracted when heating. With juicy fruit just enough water should be added to keep it from burning onto the kettle It should be cooked slowly, and crushed with a wooden masher while simmering. When it is cooked, pour it into a flannelette jelly bag which has been wrung out of hot water. Do not squeeze the pulp, but let the jules dring through into an ennead juice drain through into an enamel

A second or third extraction can be taken from the pulp by adding cold water to the mass and bringing it slowly to the boiling point. These extractions can be worked into a jelly, but tests should be made to be sure there is enough pectin. It is well to boil it down until it is about the same pectin content as in the first

If the fruit is one of those less uicy, as apples and quinces, it should cleaned and cut into small pieces; covered with water (2 pints to every pound of apples), cooked until tender, then extracted as in the case of other

SHORTENING

Lard, crisco, or any shortening, ought to be kept cool in summer and in a warmer place in winter, so that it will be soft enough to round up egg-shaped on a spoon, not run or lump. If you are using it in place of butter in a recipe, add a little salt; you will find it improves the flavor. In cake-making the shortening should be well creamed.

AUTOS ARE BADLY DAMAGED

If there's one accident, there's bound to be three, according to fatalists. This proved itself on Friday last when three automobiles were badly smashed up in Macleod. Bert Knedler the taxi man was run into by Fred Thewlis, who was making a corner too sharply. Bert's McLaughlin was badly smashed up in the head end, while Fred's, Lizzie will require a new frame, or nearly a new car. Mr. Kerr while driving, with his wife at the wheel, tried to demolish a post, but the car came out second best. Mr. Kerr not thinking the car was seriously damaged, drove the car himself, but the axle was badly bent and when making a turn, the car failed to respond to the steering wheel and smashed into another post, badly damaging the nearly new Sedan. All three cars are now in hospital receiving treatment.

CANADIAN FOREST WEALTH

There are upwards of 100,000 people in Canada actively engaged in converting the products of the forest into wealth in some form or other and with the families they represent this means that more than half a million people in the Dominion are dependent on the forest for their living.

The value of the manufactured pulp and paper products alone is $250,000,000 per year. The pulp and paper companies employ 33,000 men in the mills and pay them each year sad,000,000 in wages. The value of lumber, lath and shingles produced in lath and shingles produc

If the question had been put to you would you have figured much more than a quarter of this? When you reckon that the lumber industry proper has an invested capital of $250,000,000, employing 55,000 men and paying them $60,000,000 wages, here you have a forest business that reaches the stupendous distribution in Canada of $500,000,000 a year. The security for this annual income is neither mines nor wheat fields nor fisheries, but the only one of the family of resources that is inflammable, viz. the forest.

The march west began from that while Col. Macleod, assistant commissioner, and Capt. Denny, then inspector, took up the march with their troop of 150 men to locate the new fort on the Old Man River. They found Fort Whoop-up to be located at the junction of the St. Mary's and Old Man rivers, below Macleod. They proceeded on up the Old Man river, and one evening early in October, four months after leaving Toronto, they came upon the spot they selected as ideal for the establishment of their first post. They named the new fort Macleod after their commanding officer.

Many interesting facts of those early days are obtainable from the diary of Capt. Sir Cecil Denny, who perhaps figured more in the early his-tory of Fort Macleod, and the southern country, than almost any other officer. Capt. Denny was no baronet in those days, merely a highly-strung, adventure-seeking young Irishman, who had obtained his commission with the new force. He succeeded to his title only three years ago, on the death of his brother, the fifth baronet, in England. Capt. Denny, as has been stated, is Capt. Denny, as has been stated, is the only surviving commissioned officer of the original first troop of the mounties that established Fort Macled. In 1875 Fort Calgary was established. Capt. Denny also is the mounties that established Fort Macled. In 1875 Fort Calgary was established. Capt. Denny also is the only surviving mounted police officer to have signed the famous treaty with the Indians in 1885. For years, be-

Now don't forget that we are clearing out leather soled canvas Shoes and Balins at unheard of prices. What is the good of buying leather goods when at these bargains you can get two and three pairs of canvas ones for the price of one pair of leather.

Those who bathe in May, will soon be laid in clay. Those who bathe in June, will sing a merry tune.
